

The Cardinal
'08

Here's to

Arkansas, the 'Varsity we admire;

Rivalled by none neither near nor far.

Knowledge and virtue, her greatest gem

Await the student that enters in;

No school in the whole world her surpasses,

So with a great cheer let us fill our glasses

And drink to her greatness with all our might;

Sincere in her convictions, steadfast in the right.

The Cardinal

Volume Eleven

Published by the Class of '09,
University of Arkansas

1907-1908

Fayetteville, Arkansas

DEDICATION

With sentiments of the highest admiration, loyalty and affection, this volume of the Cardinal is dedicated to "The Faculty," who with their faithful services and true devotion have dedicated their lives to the youth of Arkansas.

FOREWORD

UPON the window of a publishing house in one of our great American cities the passer-by may read the words, "Books are the only things that live forever." We do not maintain that this volume will bear out this noble sentiment; but it has been our effort to arrange in memento form a part of the spontaneous ideas of student life. In this publication we have endeavored to be loyal to our Alma Mater and we hope that it may be a souvenir to remind you of your joyous days. The photographs and cartoons present to you the student as he really is—frollicking youth, with manners not established by age, but a student in the hey-day of life, filled with enthusiasm and hoping for distinguished honors. If we have failed in our effort at just representation you must blame yourself and the photograph.

In after years, it may be your lot to have accomplished your desired purpose in life, on your honored shoulders may rest the laurel wreath of success and your withered hands may hold the silken thread of a well spent life. But if, in those hours, these voiceless pages bring to you soft echoes of college fancies long subdued by worldly affairs, if they bring to memory cherished hopes and fond recollections of fervent friends long forgotten, if these pages do this, we shall rejoice at our finished labor and feel that our time was not spent in vain.

The Faculty as they Really Seem

"Well, well, I understand."

"Take it up there."

"Well, take your seat."

"Dig on it."

"True, true; proceed, proceed."

"Let us see what the book says."

"At Yale, I was classed with many of the distinguished men of the country."

"Well, you are charged with ignorance."

"Dream Mechanics."

"Well, to state it in another way."

"Now, let me see."

"Have a mastery of facts."

"You understand, is it not?"

"Come on, come on."

"Eyes to the front."

"Get on, if you are to ride on this train."

"Plant your seed in the ground."

"This kind of soil."

"Stand still, is it not?"

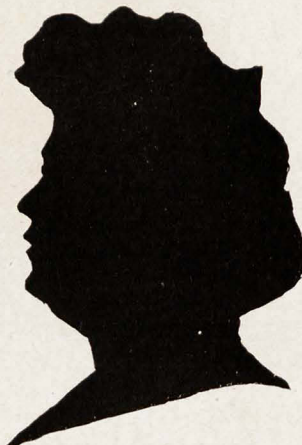

"State your reason."

"Come to the point please, be definite."

"That is not so bad."

"Now throw out your voice."

"Play more slowly and firmly—now, one, two, three four."

"Girls, I am waiting on you to get ready."

Senior Poem

We hope to stand no more examinations,
And at first thought we cry from over joy,
But how can we accept congratulations
As we leave the U. of A?

Upon these grounds we've spent four happy years,
We've looked with longing hearts for our 'o8,
And now it's come, how can we hide our tears
As we leave the U. of A?

We love our Alma Mater as ne'er before
Because the word farewell must soon be said;
This precious spot will soon know us no more;
Duty calls us away.

We leave this place, as dear to us as life,
To fight our way through a crowded busy world;
But years from now, in midst of toil and strife,
We'll praise the U. of A.

We leave classmates, teachers and president,
But may we go for the good of God and man,
That when death comes, our minds may be content.
Farewell, dear U. of A.

History of the Class of '08

In the memorable year of 1904 a band of strong-hearted pilgrims entered the land of College Life. Many kept to the straight and narrow path of digging, but some, alas! wandered aside in pursuit of youthful frivolities. Their time-worn guide, called by some Working-the-Prof's, failed them in the time of need and they soon found themselves lost in a wilderness of P's.

Meanwhile their more serious-minded companions continued rejoicing on their way until they met the famous lions, Math., Latin, etc. Some of our pilgrims then fell by the wayside, but most of these arose again to battle once more with the lions or else to pin a noted band of pilgrims who, by the pursuit of devious paths, avoided such an encounter.

There is a story that some of our noble pilgrims had certain animals guaranteed not to shy at one species of lions, which they mounted upon certain occasions and it is also said that they left these well-broken animals for others whom destiny decreed should tread the same paths and meet the same lions. But both stories are entirely unfounded.

Many and varied were the experiences of our pilgrims, but they continued faithful unto the end when in the year of grace, 1908, by the decrees of a wise and beneficent Faculty their wanderings were declared to be over. Each received his passport of "well-done" and left forever this land of Sunshine and Shadow—College Life.

FLEET COOK.

"Nations unborn your mighty name shall sound."

G. D. CHUNN.

"Great is his triumph, in retirement great."

R. E. DEANE.

"Some solitary cloister will I choose
And there with holy virgins live immured."

JOHN ELLIS.

"Be pleased your politics to spare
I'm old enough, and can myself take care."

J. E. FRY.

"In years he seemed but not impaired by age."

J. R. GRANT.

"A bard here dwelt, more fat than bard beseems."

M. A. HATHCOAT.

"Wisdom he had and to his wisdom courage."

W. C. HIGHT.

"Yet had his aspect nothing of severe,
But such a face as promised him sincere."

R. E. HOLT.

"He now assists the choir
Of angels, who his songs admire."

L. C. HUGHES.

"Truth needs no flower of speech."

*D. E. JOHNSON.

"He said right or wrong what came into his head."

J. I. JANES.

The Junior Jingle

O Junior, Junior, Junior!
Your majesty bids, we thy servants obey,
And all that we have at thy feet we now lay,
O Junior, Junior, Junior!
For quaking with fear we seniors do hear
The name of the Junior,—we hear and revere!
How shall we respect thee the rest of this year,
O great and mighty Junior!

O Junior, Junior, Junior!
We sophomores, whom thou hast raised from the dust,
And our former state made to regard with disgust,—
O Junior, Junior, Junior!
Completely contended no more to rebel,
Now heartily beg in thy mercy to dwell,
For anything short of that simply is, O!
O awe-inspiring Junior.

O Junior, Junior, Junior!
We freshmen, though 'customed to slurs and abuse,
O Junior, love thee as loves water the goose,—
O Junior, Junior, Junior!
There never was Class half so learned before,
No, never was other so 'spicuous in lore;
There never will be such a monarch no more,
O justly-honored Junior!

O Junior, Junior, Junior!
We, too, bring our trophies to place on thy brow.
Experience teaches to honor thee now,
O Junior, Junior, Junior!
Thy young men are handsome, thy ladies are fair,
And surely naught can with thy wisdom compare;
Let others ne'er dare to give themselves the air
Of foe-destroying Junior!

Thus, under subjection my enemies all
Have I (thanks to courage), the great and the small:
No spectres now come in my dreams to appall;
The wily old senior, the deadliest foe
(Perhaps 'twas because of his "knocking", you know)
Now pays me large tribute,—and this must be so.
The bloody, carnivorous, man-eating soph.,
The last of the cann'bals his gewgaws to doff,
Now, like a bold senior, can work the old prof.
The poor silly freshman tries loy'lty to prove:
He's much like the bird that he mentioned above;
I brook him, say rather in pity than love.
The special (proverbially stupid is he,
Like donkey of fable,—nor changed can be)
In his most stupid way, makes obeisance to me.

History of the Class of '09

It was just twenty-five years ago. The gods had assembled at the urgent call of Jupiter to discuss the result of a very important experiment. Mercury had just arrived with the news that the earth was in raptures over its gift from the gods. A child had been born in Arkansas, who promised to be a king among men.

Every eye was turned in anxious expectancy as Jupiter arose to speak: "Gods and Goddesses, since the days of Achilles and Hector the world has lacked a man. This want, at your suggestion has been filled. I perceive that the child who has just been born in Arkansas, will be a world conquerer, if nature is allowed to take her course. Gods assembled, in this day of trusts and combines the unit is nill, and this divinely gifted one can never accomplish our purpose. He must have help. I have in mind a plan, not Hell-enic, 'tis true, although often referred to in similar sounding words. Why not have a TRUST of brains and brawn? Give this Godlike being a number of companions, his equal in intellect and strength; together they can move the world, defy the trusts and live supreme."

"A worthy plan, O, Jupiter."

"And would it not be well to have these beings born in different places widely separated over the land?" spoke the haughty Juno, "In such case something good might even come out of Yellyville."

"Let us distribute them first and bring them together later at some central place to be educated together."

"The Arkansas University," spoke up Mercury, "is well situated for a suitable gathering place."

The thing was done. Wonderfully precocious children began to spring up all over the land. The comic supplements and the mother's corner in the Ladies' Home Journal were overflowing with the witty sayings and lively pranks of such intelligent children.

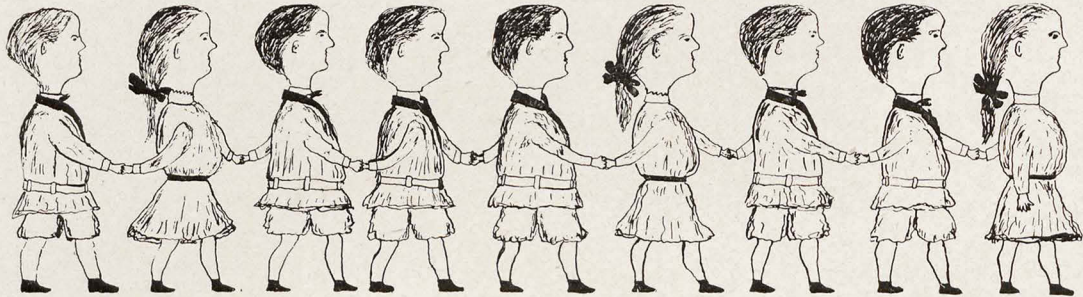

At last the day set by the gods for the assembly of these wonderful creatures dawned. September the nineteenth, 1905, they took charge of the University of Arkansas and have held possession since that day as the class of '09. As mighty Freshmen, they bore themselves with a quiet unassuming mien that, like the proverbial still waters, spoke eloquently of depth. It was that year that the class of '08 sought to distinguish itself by contesting this marvelous class in a game of football. Great was the astonishment of the surrounding world when these hitherto unnoticed Freshmen snatched victory from the older class. This was the first victory. The next year, as Sophomores, the Red and the Black floated victorious in every conflict. In football they defeated the Freshmen and even in oratory, when every class was fighting for the victory, a silver-tongued representative of the Sophomore Class won the Wingo medal.

Time passed by. At last as Juniors this wonderful class of '09 makes its appearance. As usual, in accordance with the wishes of the gods, the learned Seniors now fall defeated in two great battles—one upon the gridiron and one on the diamond. Here history ends. The Cardinal and Black has always found favor in the eyes of the gods. Jupiter and Venus have endowed the class with strength of mind and character; Hercules and Mars promise to guard its interests in all manner of conflicts and Juno and Diana have vied with each other in cultivating the beauty and charm of those far sweeter members of the class to whose lot it falls to cheer and encourage their victory crowned champions.

With such support, let us hope that—

As in the past,
May the future see
That this class, unconquered
Shall ever be.

Sophomore Poem

What shall we be, this sturdy host
Of noble Sophomores,
What will we do, where will we go
In unseen years to come?
Shall it be said of us that we,
Impatient for the strife,
Proved weak of purpose, strength, and will,
Unworthy of success?
That when temptations fierce assailed,
Our vaunted strength gave way
And we, the well trained soldiers, dropped
Before life's shot and shell?
Such imputations shall not be,
O noble Sophomores!
They're weak of base and cannot stand
Before triumphant Truth!
As the great soaring albatross
Still wings its tireless way—
Despite great winds and the lightning's flash—
Far o'er the treacherous deep,
So will our class of Sophomores,
Upheld by Honor's power,
Endure the shocks, withstand the storms,
Courageous, strong, and true.

Our Song

(Tune, Yankee Doodle.)

O, here we go, the Freshman band,
The largest of the classes,
We've got the pluck and grit and sand
To rise above the masses.

Chorus.

We're on the train for Seniorville,
There are but three more stations;
We'll all press on o'er rock and rill
With joyous contemplations.
Our hearts are full of joy so great
It is a taste of heaven.
To contemplate when we'll have weight,
To dream of nineteen 'leven.

Yell

Hippo! hyo! ris rah rack!
Watch our train move up the track!
Yes! O yes! we're full of glee
Like all classes ought to be.
Che hee! che ha!
Che-ha-ha-ha!
Freshmen! Freshmen! Rah! Rah! Rah!

We Jolly Freshmen

Though petty troubles may annoy,
This year of ours is one of joy—
Triumphant joy.
Good thoughts and hopes our minds employ,
And thus we spend a year of joy;
Such joy!
The joy of life
Well filled with deeds of noble strife.
The joy of answering many "whys,"
The joy of "E's," that glad surprise,
The joy of dreams, not dreamed at night,
The joy of plans and schemes most bright,
The joy of labor and of mirth,
The joy of air, and sea, and earth,
Countless joys our way doth cheer,
And ne'er o'er casts our sky with fear.
As a fond parent worries o'er his child,
And the child plays merrily all the while,
So upper-classmen feel undue care;
But we are joyous, so well we fare.
They fear we'll pay with many "P's;"
But we're as cheerful as you please.
They worry when we're exultant, gay,
And then declare we'll rue the day;
But merry hearts, exalted aims,
And pluck, and grit, we'll trust for gains.
And now, whate'er there be of sorrow
Will we put off until tomorrow.
Though petty troubles may annoy,
This year of ours is one of joy—
Triumphant joy.

Prophecy

CLASS OF 1908

The Imp at the Gate let me in and looked at my credentials. He pronounced them perfect and handed me a ticket, made of the most perfectly heat-resisting asbestos, on which were listed the sins for which I must do penance.

"Be careful," said the Imp, "to have the ticket punched for each sin expiated, so that your term here may not be longer than the original sentence. The executive clemency is never invoked here in favor of the careless." And with something meant for a smile, he added that I might find several of my old friends here.

So I concealed my ticket and started on a search for friends of old, being aided in my explorations by the repeated vociferation of the word "Stung" coming in accents strangely familiar from a commodious apartment near by. I entered. Above the door, in red hot letters, glowed the sign, "HEADQUARTERS OF THE GOAR LYCEUM. M. C. HUTTON, FOURTH ASSISTANT BEELZEBUB, DEVIL-IN-CHARGE." Similar placards announced a cordial welcome to all old members.

I was surprised at the slight attendance. Beside myself there were only two present. One was the Honorable Fourth Assistant above mentioned, who, having arrived before the rest of us, had, with characteristic energy and thoughtfulness, prepared quarters for those who might follow, in which kind work he was greatly aided by the powers of the official position to which his natural endowment of impish traits had elevated him. He was in charge and conducted what I considered a very severe examination on the law of Fire Insurance, the other member being the victim. Him, I had difficulty in recognizing. He was arrayed in what I later found to be the most approved style in these parts, of which he was the acknowledged dude. High Asbestos collar, and immaculate white shirt of the same material, evening clothes of the newest aluminum fabric, pointed and highly polished cast iron shoes, adorned him. His hair was parted exactly in the middle and pasted down on each side with some shiny oil of molten metal. As he invariably missed the questions propounded to him by the Fourth Assistant, that Dignity awoke the echoes with a hilarious "Stung, Mr. Carmichael, you make twenty-five on this examination"! In his agitation, the Victim dropped his ticket, and before he recovered it, I perceived that it was marked with the words "For all eternity".

On my arrival, the examination was discontinued, the Lyceum was called to order, and the Fourth Assistant took the chair. The Victim claimed the floor. He began an impassioned oration. "I protest," said he, "against such high-handed proceedings. Mr. Fourth Assistant, you know as well as I do that you are only a de facto devil, and not empowered to act in this manner. The Supreme Court of Arkansas, in a case which I took—"

"Receives no credence here," interjected the Fourth Assistant. "You'll have to cuss the faculty and let it go."

Here we were interrupted by the arrival of another—one whose stately tread and familiar mien and form revealed his identity at once. "Mr. Chairman, and gentlemen of the Jury" he said, "I beg to be marked present". It was Clerget, and of course he took the floor for the rest of the meeting.

"Before proceeding with your remarks, Mr. Clerget", said the Fourth Assistant, "I deem it proper to call your attention to the sign above the door. All my acts receive full faith and credit by the highest authorities here. You will also be delighted to know, and I consider it one of the redeeming features of our situation, that certain words and phrases forbidden in our meetings on the earth are admitted here, and obtain that sanction which their force and expression demands."

Clerget greeted this piece of intelligence with a grin that showed his keen appreciation of this courtesy to orators. He then proceeded. The stenographic force assigned us from his Satanic Majesty's headquarters soon broke down and quit in disgust. I am therefore unable to give you his speech verbatim. But he was just from the earth and he gave us full details concerning our classmates there and enroute. His remarks drew forth continued applause, for they indicated a great addition to our ranks in the near future. Below are the facts as related.

Carter, E. L., Justice of the Peace, and, when criminals are scarce, teacher of the young idea, is still doing business in a remote mountain hamlet, where the people are too sleepy to see anything strange in the fact that the J. P. is still a partner with the attorney--with the verdict in every suit before him, one Strength.

Brickhouse early acquired a most lucrative practice, as a representative of railroads. He is now, in the year 1949, President of the Jonesboro Southeastern, Leased and Operated Lines, and in a fair way of becoming a member for all eternity in this body.

Dobyns and Eaton, after graduation, each pursued the error of his way according to his own peculiar bent. But finally they formed an alliance, offensive and defensive, against all clients, and reports say that the success of the partnership surpasses all bounds, and is strictly in accordance with the purpose for which it was formed.

Kirtley, when at last rewarded with his sheep-skin, deserted the wagon for the bench, serving for forty years as Police Judge of Argenta. His wealth is reported as unlimited as his knowledge of law is the reverse.

Morton and Morris formed a partnership, which was never dissolved. They never quarreled over a just division of their fees, probably because there were none.

Murphy began his practice with every indication of substantial success. He was early retained in a case of international importance, and began his speech. He is still beginning.

Longstreth, forgetting all the law he ever knew, but retaining his ability as a teacher, succeeded the Dean. For his lecturer on Real Property, he had one Swaim, who was considered fit for the place because he never owned any and could speak without prejudice.

Galligan developed into such an orator that his services won him recognition on any occasion where there was the least excuse for a speech. He became the leading night orator for the Salvation Army post at Little Rock. Here, while Clifford plays a rusty accordion to drown the horrible sound he calls his voice, Galligan exhorts the sinners.

Mayes and Toler became respected Justices of the Peace, Ramsey was too good to study law and left the profession for that of selling suburban lots.

"Tuggle had just graduated when I left," said Clerget, "and was ready to accept a position in the consular service, having been appointed ambassador to Madagascar.

"Winn, Whitehead, and Josephs"—at the mention of these loved names the Fourth Assistant could not restrain tears of joy—"were finally elected. Whitehead became a Senator, the others Representatives. No doubt their careers would have been brilliant and glorious"—and here the speaker choked a sob—"but their respective constituencies resigned."

When Clerget concluded, the Fourth Assistant took the floor, and while he puffed away at a brimstone cigarette, tearfully related a career, meteoric both in rise and fall, and it developed that he got in on general principles. Your reporter, "The prophet," so said his card, was removed from the earth because it was learned that he got there in the first place through mistake. His place here is therefore fixed, certain and eternal.

Aspirations of a Junior Law Student

I long to be a lawyer,
One of the fighting kind,
With lots of clients in my office
And lots more in my mind.
Or else a politician, gay and grand,
Whom all the Laymen hear so much about;
With very little cash on hand,
But lots of I. O. U. paper out.
Or a judge I would be,
And go my whole life through
Enjoying fame because of all
The Corporations I would do.
Or I would be the "President,"
And make "Old Teddy" laugh,
To see me form these text-book writers
Into my legal staff.

INFORMATION BUREAU

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY

Midsummer, 1908.

Judge J. H. Carmichael,
Dean of the Law School,
Little Rock.

Dear Dean:—

I was very glad to receive your letter of some days ago, and it is with pleasure that I submit the following report of the fellows who will be your pride and mainstay during the coming school year. The fellows are hustling this summer to make the where-withal to finish their course in the Law School, and I am sure that if they work as hard after they get into the practice as they are this summer, something is sure to happen and no mistake.

Martineau is touching the people lively for the coin of the realm by doing all kinds of stunts in his favorite avocation, sleight-of-hand freaks. It would amaze you some to see that "lightning wizard" execute his thrilling tricks and pull people's legs for the "dust that makes the lawyers grin."

Nolan continues to enjoy his usual good luck, having been fortunate enough to secure a job as caller of trains in the new Union Station in Little Rock. His malodorous voice is well suited for such work, and he is making good at it. So if he "makes a bobble" of his law practice, he will always have this to fall back on.

Atkinson is a true genius, and shows his business sagacity in bolting his stenographic work at the Supreme Court for a rushing trade at Hot Springs shining the foot coverings of the summer tourists. He uses a peculiar polish of his own make, which cannot be duplicated; and he has a trick of shining one shoe and then absolutely refusing to shine the other for less than a plunk or more. Although the smiles don't show up much on his customer's faces, they do on the shoes and Atkinson usually has the satisfaction of feeling the plunks hit his pocket. He tells me confidentially that he stuck Judge T. N. for a five-spot a few days ago. Was this "undue influence" or "duress?"

Walden is busy taking up periodical collections at his great summer revival meetings. He works very successfully on the feelings of his hearers and then proceeds to "work" them for the mazoumas.

Purdom has incorporated de facto for the summer at Coney Island. You doubtless know the prohibition wave has struck there, and Purdom is taking advantage of his opportunity and is very artfully putting pink lemonade down the thirsty throats of the public while he extracts the currency from their purses.

Tobey, the boy with the open face and innocent gray eyes, is spending the summer at Battle Creek, Michigan, recovering from the effects of the storm which broke upon his devoted head when the cartoons in the Cardinal came out. He says he wouldn't be artist for the school again if it meant an L. L. M. degree for him.

Vedder tells me he has secured a most pleasant position as foreman of the hello girls at the telephone office. With his charming personality and winning manners, to say nothing of his face, which alone is a fortune, I understand that he is making good so emphatically that he is almost persuaded to renounce his legal ambitions. I would suggest that you see him and attempt to reclaim him before it is too late.

White, the spectacular blonde, is traveling through the rural districts as a living advertisement of Dr. Blechem's Facial Cream.

Whitaker is training his voice for future forensic conquests by singing in light opera. He writes me that the emoluments are very gratifying, the profits from last week alone amounted to no less than $1.37 1-2.

Bowers is busy at Forest Park, where he is employed as "barker" for Mme. Schnitzki, the World Renowned Horoscopist and Palmist. There is always a crowd gathered around the genial Lee, and the poor woman is nearly worked to death in the attempt to keep up with the trade.

Condray is also in the summer park business, operating a shell game at Wonderland Park. All the "rubes" make for his joint and remain there until their funds are gone and they have borrowed all they can raise. And in the meantime Condray is as solemn as a judge.

Bourland has concluded that he ought to have a wife to support him, and he is on the still-hunt. Last week he wrote me that he had broken the heart of an ante-bellum spinster who claims to own a ranch in Texas worth some $100,000 or more. But Bourland says that the property was left to her on condition that she not marry anyone with questionable ambitions—and Bourland you know is conscientious.

Caron is doorkeeping at the Republican National Convention in Chicago. He informs me that the tips are very encouraging—and that he is also taking tips from the different speakers for use at the Lyceum next winter.

G. C. Carter was running a peanut stand in Argenta the last time I heard from him. They were threatening to run him off the street at that time, and I do not know where he is at this time.

Had I the time I would like to go on and tell you all about the rest of the fellows: how Dickinson is advertising agent for a new brand of cigars and smoking tobacco; about the success Elkins is making in his efforts on the stump for Bryan; about Locklar's increasing fame as a singer for phonograph records; about Johnson's popularity with the fans of New York, where he is playing with the Nationals; about the crowds that attend the singing school which is being run by Andrews down at Fourche Dam; about the way the young ladies are all after Herring, who is canvassing for Vassar; about Fox, sweating away in the wheat fields of Kansas, where he says he is getting back to Nature; and so forth, ad infinitum. The fellows are all working, and you may surely look for us to show up promptly when school opens in the fall.

Very respectfully,

Who?

Who's Who at the Law School

The President of the Senior Class is Oscar D. Longstreth, M. Di., B. S., M. A., etc., etc. He is also President of the Arkansas State Athletic Association of Schools and Colleges, President of the Goar Lyceum, and goodness only knows what else. In the Lyceum, which is the debating society composed of the entire Law School, he is one of our recognized leaders. Longstreth is an old football player, and when anything gets in his way it is sure to find him "playing low" and "buckin' the line." The Junior Class found this out at the beginning of the year, when the Lyceum was being organized. We know him now, however, and we all "buck the line" right with him. Three cheers for Longstreth!

A. O. Andrews, President of the Class of '09, is our next whoo. His full name is Adelbert Owen Andrews, but that is such a mouthful we skip it and call him A. O. He is an A. B., going from Friends University of Wichita, Kansas, where he graduated in '04, to Haverford College of Philadelphia as scholarship man in '05. When A. O.'s second term as critic of the Lyceum expired we were all sorry; but being good Democrats, no third term goes with us. He tried to sing one night when he got to thinking of his old Kentucky home back in Kansas, and everybody fainted. Finally, Pete Hutton, who was then sargeant at arms and general flunky, let fly a "Cooley on Torts" at him and order was restored. He has been very well behaved ever since.

John E. Clerget, good-natured, witty, eloquent and ugly, was blown into the Law School through an open window one night last fall when the Lyceum was in session, and he landed sitting on his neck instead of—well, the usual place—in which attitude he has been sitting ever since. As a dispenser of super-heated atmosphere and blarney, Clerget has few equals—even in the Law School.

When our able artist was requested to draw a picture of Bro. Henry Clay Locklar, he drew an interrogation mark—and then he felt hurt when we told him we weren't after a likeness especially, but that it was a picture we wanted. If the ability to ask questions is an evidence of legal ability, the rest of us law students might as well quit school and go to farming because Bro. Henry Clay is going to gobble up all the practice in Arkansas—and some predict he will beat that. We may smile when he says he is going to do something "agin," and when those big wondering blue eyes of his open wide, and that at-peace-with-all-the-world smile gets busy, and we hear him say, "Now Jedge, s'pos'n," we all brace up and get our note books ready, for we know something's coming. Nor are we ever disappointed. For two terms Locklar served us nobly as—sargeant at arms.

Guy W. Swaim, ex-president of the Lyceum, is one of our keenest, most logical and most convincing speakers. Swaim is a quiet, thoughtful fellow—and as absent minded as a judge.

William Patrick Galligan is a Frenchman, as the name indicates. He wasn't born in Ireland, but that wasn't his fault. (See his portrait in the drawing of the Lyceum in session.) Some one dubbed him William Pat early in life, and the name fitted so well it stuck. The poor fellow is subject to occasional oratorical spasms, for which there seems to be no cure. When one of his attacks comes on, we are likely to hear something like this: "Gen-tle-men—(ominous pause) may my tuhung cleave to the roots of my mouth—" and the rest is lost in thunderous applause.

Mr. Dooley on the Goar Lyceum

Shure an' it's great doin's they do be havin' doon at th' Law Schule ivery Wi'nsday noight, said Mr. Dooley, as we lighted our pipes for a cool smoke. Oi wint doon th' lasht toime they was in sesshun, and shure, 'twas grreat shpor-rt t' see th' young barristhers par-r-rade their shtock of nooly acquired legal phr-r-rases, an' t' hear-r-r thim raise th' divil aboot things that th' old lawyer-r-rs niver hear-r-rd of. Oh, Oi'll tell yez, they are a noisy set; and the shpread-eagle or-r-r-ratory that thim fellows shpieled out wud have shamed th' Shtate Legislatur-re whin th' Cigar-r-ritt bill was oop.

Oi hear-r-rd soom wan maulin' on a table wid a sledge hammer-r and yellin' "Ordher-r-r" at th' top av his v'ice; and when th' shmoke had cleared away sufficiently for th' secretar-r-ry t' rhead th' minits, th' little fellow wid a moostash, whom th' fellows called "Dob," got oop in th' prisidint's chair and pahssed sintince on a number-r av th' mimber-r-rs for not pleadin' guilty t' th' char-r-rge av bein' absent. Wan divil-may-care sort av a fellow plead as an excuse that he had been detained at th' police stashun, an' he was excused; but anither poor young gint wid a worrid look to his face said he had to shtay to hum and moind th' baby the whoile his woife wint t' th' cloob, and th' prisidint shtuck him th' limit, and none there wor t' question th' justice av th' decision.

After th' pinalties had all been assissed, there was a pale-faced fellow, who answered t' th' name av Swaim, got oop an' adjoosted his monocle th' whoiles he perceeded t' perpethrate a t'ree-quar-rther-r-rs av an hour infliction upon the Society, durin' which th' most av the mimbers wint t' shlope. My frien'd Galligan thin arose and deliverred an oration on th' subjec' av "Insanity as a Difinse for-r-r Croime," in th' coorse av which some personal allushuns t' wan Misther Locklar wor resinted by that gintleman, an' th' sargint-t-ar-r-r-ms was called upon t' resthore ordher. Galligan's shpache was a foine effoort, if Oi do be sayin' it mesilf, and him a coosin av moine. Oi niver c'u'd mak oot what he wor drivin' at, but Oi guess that's joost proof that it was foine.

Whin he had finished an' th' applause from th' fellows that was awake had aroused th' wans that had dhropped off t' shlope, th' secretary, who was a busy-lookin' young gentleman wid a foine face an' a big head av hair-r joost loike these football player-rs, got oop and called th' debate. Th' soobject, which he said was a ver-ry important wan fallin' under th' head av Domestic Relations, was "Raysolved, that th' choild is th' son av the father." T'ree av th' young gints, wid glahsses on th' inds av their-r noses and wid expresshuns on their-r faces as if they had joost berried their-r grandmither's pet hens, wor called t' act as judges, and they took th' sates allotted thim. Th' rool-call showed that all of the debhater-r-rs wor absint but wan short, pudgy little fellow they called Cler-r-rget. Th' prisident then appinted himself and a couple av ithers t' carry on th' debbate, which was then opened.

Cler-r-get was th' fer-rst shpaker-r, and he sthar-rted off somethin' loike this: "Gintlemin av th' Joory—Yes have hear-rd this question discussed th' noight, orr if yez haven't yez are goin' t' hear-r it. Oi wan' t' say in th' beginnin' av this, my main spache, as Oi have a rayjoonder (that's th' way it sounded t' me, annyway), after th' ithers git t'rough. These old maid schule taychurrs, these crack-brained editors and these shyster-r-r lawyers don't know as much aboot this subject as did Adam's off-ox. We want this matther settled roight her-r-re acor-r-din' t' th' law and justice; an' if th' goggle-eyed pedagogue overr there seeks t' interrupt me"—Just thin ther-r-e was several av th' fellows got wild and slung a lot av books at th' poor fellow's head, while ithers yelled for a pint av ordher. Faith, methought some av thim had morre than wan pint already. Whin th' shmoke had cleared away, th' prisidint assessed a foine av 25 cints against Clerget for disthurbin' th' pace and not lettin' th' fellows have their pint that they was yellin' so for; and Cler-r-get yelled that he would see th' prisidint in th' home av th' Divil before he would pay a cint.

Th' nixt shpaker was thin called, Locklar by name; and after shtandin' there an' openin' his mouth wide for about ten minits, durin' which toime he managed to say "And 'er" several toimes, he quit and just shtood therre and let his mouth hang open, which Galligan informmed me he did most av th' toime. An' well he moight, for 'twas that larrge 'twas th' most conspicuous thing on th' soide av th' table where he was shtandin'.

Foinally he sat doon amid ghrreat applause, to which he responded wid a shmoile that would have turnned an ice-factory into a smoke-house. His shmoile tuk oop so mooch room that th' young gint sittin' nixt t' him had t' moove t' give him shpace.

Th' nixt young fellow was on th' wrong soide av th' debate, an' rayfused t' shpake. "A foine lawyr he'll make," Oi raymarrked t' my young frind Galligan, "if he's such scruples as that whin he goes int' th' practice." But Galligan asshurred me that he was a parrt av th' schule, and would niver practice.

Dob, th' prisidint, then called himsilf t' th' flure, and shtarrted into a shpache in which th' wurds came out as fahst as th' shot out av a Gatlin gun. Finally, wan av th' fellows grabbed him by th' collar and pulled him out int' th' yarrd, where he was still shpielin' when we all left.

Clerrget was then called forr his rayjoonder, and he quickly settled th' debate by suggestin' that th' bye moight have bin a gurrl. Ivery wan yelled, and he was declared th' victor. Th' Scretary announced that as it was 11:30, all gints that had woives awaitin' thim moight be excused, and therre was a grand rush for th' dure.

The Artist's Dream after visiting an animated meeting of Goar Lyceum

Lamentations of the Learners of the Law

The Law is known by all under the sun,
At least, that's what people presume:
For "ignorance of the law excuses no one"
And we know that's precisely their doom.

But this is all wrong, I assure you of that:
Because years we must spend in law schools
In our efforts at getting the laws straightened out pat,
Till we're so mixed that we feel much like fools.

We've spent days and weeks with Mehaffy on Torts,
And it looks like we've spent them in vain,
Since Cooley himself won't attempt to find Torts
To explain it in language that's plain.

And the same may be said of the little word Fraud,
That the courts can't define it is true:
So I want to know why, in the name of the Lawd,
They require it of me and of you.

And then there's Carmichael and his Conflict of Laws,
Here's where we find food for some thinking;
And it seems to us all that the loopholes and flaws
Will inevitably drive us to drinking.

And besides all of this, we've "lex loci contractus,"
The gist of which we must know
Before we're allowed our profession to practice
Or forth as law graduates go;

And the principles learn of "lex loci rei,"
And many more just as distressing:
For example, "lex celebrationes loci;"
Now wouldn't that put you to guessing?

Distinctions as shadowy and fine as can be
We meet with in Equity's Code;
While the lectures on Evidence by Mr. Murphee
Seem to add the last straw to the load.

Nor is this all yet—Fletcher's Real Estate,
And Brooks on Domestic Relations;
And a man who to these has just entered the gate:
Mr. Robertson, who talks Corporations.

(Robertson no longer says he "don't care a straw,"
That "the ills of a bachelor's life
Are blisses compared with a mother-in-law
And a boarding-school miss for a wife.")

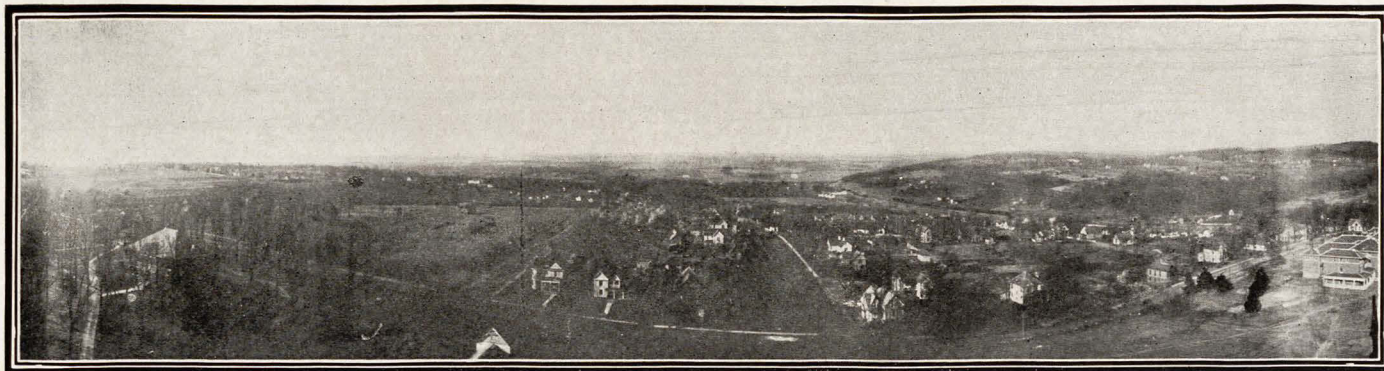

But back to our troubles. We know we have more
By thousands than flesh is heir to
In other professions, where just a few score
Are all that they have to pass through.

But we're explaining, not complaining: you know how it is,
That no legal lawyers could be
Without knocking out eyes in the Property quiz—
"Sparing justice feeds iniquity."

So onward we'll press, all tried as by fire,
'Till we realize our fondest ambition;
We'll maintain our patience and bottle our ire
And—thank Heaven when we're done with tuition.

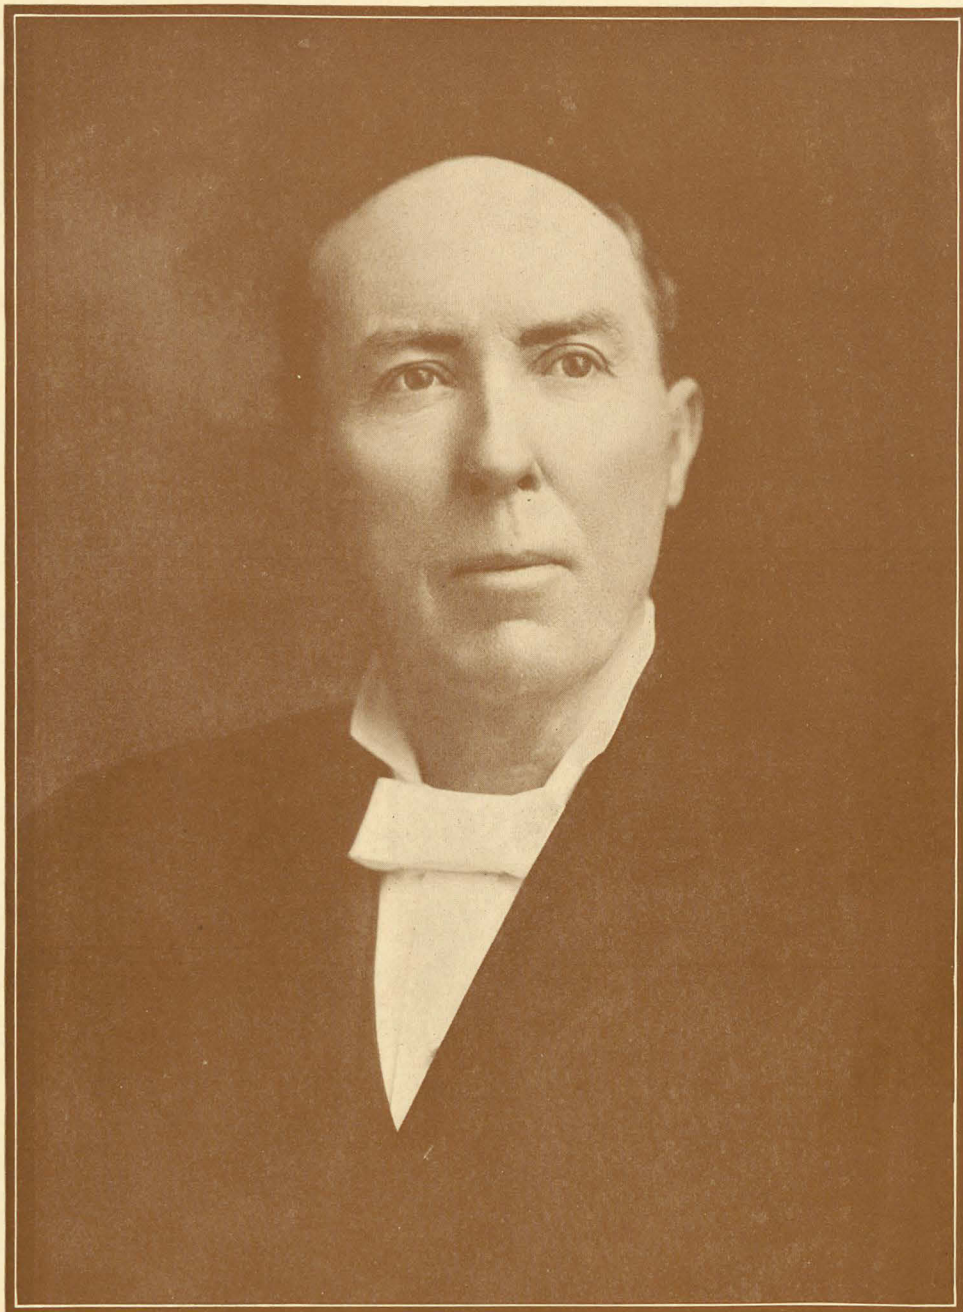

—One Who Knows.

Junior Yell

Well man! Dead man! Sick man! Stiff!
 Cut 'em up, tear 'em up, what's the dif?
 Humorous, tumorous, blood and gore,
 Juniors! Juniors! Just "one" more.

The Sophomore's Aim

I

Often! How often! Have tales been told,
Of brave men and wise men, both young and old,
Who have fought hard battles and victories won;
Yet volumes are unwritten and songs unsung.

There are lesions to detect and regions to explore;
These are left for the present Sophomore.
The Freshman 's too young and the senior too old—
Also the Junior for work of this mold.

There is Sarcoma to meet, Hydrophobia to cure;
A diploma to obtain, and license to secure.
The diseases will retreat 'neath the Sophomore's gaze:
For he'll meet them in battle in numerous ways.

He is designed to be courteous and true in his work,
And never from his task or his duty to shirk.
His patient's life in his hands he may hold,
But he will reckon its value as more than gold.

His work may be venturous, but careful and right:
Always to serve his greatest delight.
Ever ready to go at midnight or noon,
For his patients will his time consume.

When duty calls he will be there,
Life's joys and sorrows alike to share;
For on the "Heights of the Doctor's Fame,"
There lies the heart of the Sophomore's aim.

—Charles Fowler.

Medical Diary

SEPTEMBER.

1st.—Matriculation book opens, numerous letters for choice seats.

OCTOBER.

- 1st.—Opening day, Dr. Lenow (Dean of the Faculty) greets the students with a few well chosen words. Regular lectures follow.
- 2d.—The Freshmen begin to read signs and learn the city—two get lost and never return.
- 3d.—Mathews, that delightful Senior (so the nurses say), enters.
- 4th.—First surgical clinic—many Freshmen can not stand the pressure, so leave the operating room.
- 5th.—May resigns as chemist and pharmacist for State Hospital, and enters school.
- 6th.—(Sunday.)—A certain student visits our Sister City (Argenta).
- 7th.—Many new students arrive, to revel in the mysteries of medicine.
- 8th.—Read Drug Company reports immense sale on medical books.
- 9th.—Cottrell enters school. Senior class meeting; election of officers.
- 10th.—Beasley changes boarding house—hoping to get turnips, fat meat and cabbage, and especially fewer “bugs.”
- 11th.—Ware and Thompson go courting—to the Deaf Mute Institute, of course.
- 12th.—Mathews and Cottrell unite in matrimony to separate May 1st, '08. (Graduate.) First meeting of the X. Z. X.
- 15th.—Clark requests his room mate (Beasley) to apply Hydrotherapy to his feet.
- 16th.—Freshmen are invited into the Anatomical Laboratory. Strange delusions that night—one man is heard to say (no more steak for me).
- 17th.—Brilliant Switzer instructs the Prof. of Surgery how to prepare for an operation.
- 19th.—Prof. Watkins: “Lewis, define bacteria?” Ans. “They are (Pizen) things.”
- 22d.—Prof. Dibrell puts Powell on first base (as pneumonia doctor).

"College Life" of a Medical Student

I

The first year a man enters college
To become a new-born "Med."
But for the first two weeks he's there,
He feels that he'd rather be dead.

He thinks of home and mother
Whom he had left behind;
He thinks of seven long months to pass,
He wishes he had changed his mind.

He thinks of his boyhood moments
In which he used to play,
But now they're spent in learning
The bones and muscles in "Gray."

He takes lectures and dissecting
The clinics and the quiz;
He then takes out his program card
To see what the next hour is.

Finding nothing for that hour,
He hastily trips away,
Down the street to his boardinghouse
To learn some muscles in "Gray."

His boarding place is very tough;
It's not like home to him.
His bed is hard, his cover scant,
His hash is very slim.

His biscuits are hard and very dry,
His steak is very tough
On account of a paralyzed "Masseter"
He quits before he gets enough.

His mattress is hard and knotty,
His pillow is narrow and thin,
His illium bone from friction,
Has penetrated the skin.

His hash is hard as I formerly said—
Mainly composed of stew.
Another feature that comes in—
He pays for it before it's due.

10

The session is in the winter time
As everybody knows.
Let it rain or shine, snow or sleet,
"Old Med." is forced to go.

11

Up to the dissecting room he goes,
Next down in the hall.
He's all the day and part of the night,
Trying to catch it all.

12

The first or second thing he learns
After he has entered school
Is that he lacked more of being a "Solomon"
Than he did of being a fool.

13

But time rolls on, and Christmas comes,
With all its presents rare;
And he thinks of home and mother
And wishes he was there.

14

He listens to all the lectures,
And takes in all they say
Just to get a seat in the lecture hall
On examination day.

15

His mind is worried from study,
His head may give him pain;
He lays old "Gray" aside for awhile
And tries to settle his brain.

16

He goes to the Majestic theatre,
Which only makes him worse,
For it fills a cavity in his head,
And makes one in his purse.

17

The name of a "medical student"
Is a horror to the Little Rock clan.
They look on him with an eye of scorn
As the lowliest grade of man.

18

But the time will come if nothing happens
When he his crown will wear.
When free from "Whitleather" and "Waspuest"
In his home of better fare.

19

Some have no use for a doctor,
While free from any disease,
But wait 'til the hour of sickness
And see who they call, "If you please."

20

He's then the best fellow on top of the earth,
As long as he calls each day;
But a lower down devil does not exist
Than when he comes up and ask for pay.

21

But wait 'til he gets his sheepskin,
The residence of his pride,
It's doctor this and doctor that
And doctor on every side.

22

But when his four years have ended,
And from "College Life" he's free,
His "Diploma" is pinned on tail of his coat
On the tail of his name, "M. D."

23

He then enters into his practice
At his home in his native land;
He meets with many of his old-time friends
And gives them the greeting hand.

24

Though some of his old friends scorn at him,
And call him a little guy.
They're healthy now—just wait awhile;
They'll know him "by and by."

25

He's now located permanently
Like the house that was built on a stone:
He's free from the horrors of "College Life;"
From Little Rock, its "beefsteak and bone."

—Extract.

Definitions of Love

It is not definable.

A temporary insanity.

The greatest cementive force of social life.

One-fourth association; three-fourths imagination.

That which calls Dr. Brough to Kentucky.

The thing that keeps the world going.

"Brevity unequalled."

An inward uneasiness, an outward all-overness.

A gift divine, something we feel, but can't define.

A tickling sensation of the heart which cannot be scratched.

A consuming passion of the soul.

A conglomeration of unexpressible feelings.

The blind God.

Love is the essence of life.

Something given, not bought.

That which makes one desire to leave home and cleave to another.

That most fickle of all the abstract.

A thing so divine that description makes it less.

Nothing surrounded by hot air.

A temporary insanity which acts as an escape for an over accumulation of sentiment and romance.

Love manufactures every man into a poet while the fever lasts.

Love is the life of the soul. It is the harmony of the universe.

26th—Miss Stubblefield arrives. Mr. Barrett powders his face.

28th—Arkansas vs. Rolla—7 to 5. Night-shirt parade.

Definitions of Beauty

That quality which few possess.

A short-lived tyrant.

Moonlight.

My head can't say it.

Multiplicity of unity.

An Arkansas girl.

What you make it.

"Pretty ways and good manners."

A rare compound of blue eyes, fair skin and brown hair.

An optical illusion.

An angelic expression.

Something girls are jealous of and boys crazy about.

The expression of love.

Paint and powder.

Beauty is the outer covering of a good inner being.

Beauty is an exquisite flower and its perfume is virtue.

Beauty is the first present nature gives to women, and the first it takes away.

Beauty is but a flower which wrinkles will devour.

The Students' Creed

I believe in Arkansas, the University, the maker of men and women, and in Judge Tillman, one of her sons, born within the State, educated at the 'Varsity; in after years he rose and ascended to the throne of Presidency, from thence he shall rule the students with a mild but disciplined hand.

I believe in cutting chapel; the working of Profs; the strolling in corridors; the removal of sticks; the renewal of sins, and in buttin'-in. Amen.

Vacation Letter of a Freshman

My dearest dear I am at home
I've saw my parents and my chum,
I've did what you ought to not do,
I et my wax and lost my gum.

I've shown my cap, coat, gloves and pants
And learnt 'em all how I could drill,
I've went off on four separate jants
To praise the name of Fayetteville.

I've saw four million men or more
Observing of my uniform;
But I walked on and tried to think
I was not no better than them.

I have not had no fun at all,
Since I left there where you were at;
I aint bin home sense way last fall,
But you outshine my sister Mat.

There haint no use to try no more
To stop this aking hart of mine,
From jumping up into my mouth
When your sweet smiles enter my mind.

Now dear, I've wrot what I have writ,
It should be kept twixt I and you,
I no much more, but I will quit,
My time is up, I've did my do.

“Is it Not?”

I slept and dreamed I heard a song,
As bad as ever was heard;
My soul took up its discords and
I drank in every word.
It did a simple story tell—
The wording I have forgot;
But the burden of the story was
Three words only: Is it not?

I woke me up and on my couch
I tried to think it all out;
But not at all could I recall
E'en what the song was about.
Some physical phenomena
I new were mixed in the plot,
But all the rest oblivion was,
Save those three words: Is it not?

Nebuchadnezzar was not more
At a loss, I'm sure, to recall
His drunken dream than I was when
I lay and gazed at the wall.
“Oh, for another Daniel now,”
I groaned as if I'd been shot,
“To tell me what is this I've dreamed,
And explain these words, Is it not?”

“Begone!” I cried, “ye hated words,
Why ring ye so in my ear?
Have mercy on a mortal man!
Aroint! avaunt! disappear!”
I clinched my teeth and shut my eyes—
My blood lay still in a clot;
But 'twas no use! Those burning words
Were in plain sight: Is it not?

I got me up and breakfasted,
Not aware of it, I confess;
It was a silly thing to do,
But I did it nevertheless.
It seemed to me as if my head,
Just like some sort of a slot-
Machine kept swinging to and fro
To a rhythmical Is it not?

- 30th—The last day of all fools.

I betook me to the college for
To seek relief from the thing;
But das Ding an sich still in my ears
Rang on a pitiless ring.
By this time you can guess that I
Had become a little bit hot;
Still everywhere that I would look
I could see those words: Is it not?

I met with Bagley in the hall—
You know him?..... Yes, he's the one;
I meet him in the hall and say,
"Are you your mother's own son?"
"Why, yes," says he, "I'm 'sposed to be,
Though it's been disputed a lot.
But say, I'm thinking: all the fools
Are out today, Is it not?"

Miss Olga Davis next I meet—
Her face with beauty besmeared;
"Are you living where you moved from last?"
Said I. Miss Olga appeared
To be confused, but quickly said:
"Yes, at the very same spot;
But I hope that you will never find
The way up there—Is it not?"

Oh! "Is it not?"! In those three words
Is shut up some that is good;
They express the deep prof-etic soul
As no three other words could.
Quite well impressed upon my mind
Are they with many a jot;
But I know I'll their full meaning grasp
Never here on earth, Is it not?

Could all great Neptune's ocean wash
Away this one mental blot,
How happy would I ever be!
And how content with my lot!
What is't to me, I'd like to know,
A joule, an erg, or a watt?
If forever come my life to vex
Those dreadful words, Is it not?

May

1st—J. B. Bunn and Winfrey begin to cram for the examinations.

3d—R. E. Holt sings his first farewell on Dickson street.

6th—John Revel says, "Dr. Carroll, if you will pass me in Chemistry, I will do as much for you some day."

12th—C. C. Alexander stuck by the O. D. for whistling in the corridor.

15th—W. L. Miser fined by the Senior Committee for boisterous singing.

17th—B. L. Williams, one of our students, preached at Rose Hill.

19th—Miss Tillman stuck for strolling in the corridor.

22d—Literary societies meet for the last time.

24th—Dr. Johnson warns his classes of the examinations.

28th—The final examinations begin.

30th—Memorial Day; holiday.

Toasts to the "Varsity"

Here is to the good old U. of A.,
May she grow stronger and prosper.
Here is to the students gone before,
And here is to the ones who come after.

Here's to the good old U. of A.,
May she stand until the judgment day.

Here's to our Alma Mater,
May her influence live long after her walls have crumbled into dust.

May the U. of A. live as long as it likes,
And have what it likes as long as it lives.

Here's to the best old University, the U. of A.

Here's to the dear old U. of A., may she prosper and live to a ripe old age.

Here's to the Cardinal—may its colors never fade.

Alma mater, God bless her, may she live and flourish.

Here's to the University of Arkansas which is as far above the other colleges of the State as the stars are above the earth.

Here's to the dear old U. of A.,
Where we're fed on chops and whey;
Where the girls are always prim,
And the boys are in the swim.

Here's to the grand old U. of A.,
Look away, look away,
Down south in Arkansas
The grandest you ever saw
Rah, Rah, Rah! Rah, Rah, Rah!
Arkansas, Arkansas!

Here's to the school we love the best;
Here's to the "exams." we all detest.
Here's to the teachers one and all;
Here's to the dear old U. of A. Hall.

June

MABEL DAVIS

1st—Many tell how they feel in the robes of higher classmen.

3d—Memorial Day, a holiday.

The Demosthenean Literary Society

MOTTO: "Tam Marte quam Minerva."

"As Much by Courage as by Skill."

COLORS: Green and White.

EMBLEMS: Cedar and White Lilies.

The Demosthenean Literary Society was organized in February, 1907, for the purpose of giving to its members a literary training which could not be obtained in any of the other societies on account of their congested condition.

This is the only literary society in the University which has a limited membership; its membership being limited in order to give active members weekly access to the program. It is also the only society which has honorary members acting as critic.

Students who are looking to law, journalism, politics, ministry or any other public calling will do well to visit this society before joining any other society.

The doors of this society are open to any male student of the University who is eligible; both collegiate and preparatory.

BOHEMIAN CLUB

The Bohemian Club

On the last day of February a homeless infant Idea new-born and scantily clothed was found wandering in the vicinity of the 'Varsity by J. J. James and George J. Moore. Such a thing being a most rare occurrence, the Idea, afore-said, was adopted and carefully nurtured by these gentlemen and in their task, which has proved to be a considerable pleasure as well, they were soon assisted by H. E. Morrow, O. E. Williams, L. B. Leister, C. C. Cash, and A. Starbuck.

This Idea, which by the way, has developed into a lusty child, and those who cared for it have come to be called the Bohemian Club.

For the edification of the masses the following information is added to the above history: The Bohemian Club provides for a general and informal discussion of literature and current events. Its nature is such that it does not encroach upon the provinces of the literary societies. The membership, because of the nature and purposes of the Club, is limited to ten. The Bohemian Club has no constitution or by-laws and keeps no records of its meetings. Solomon, foreseeing the organization of the Club, wrote Proverbs 15:23, and this text has been taken by the Club as its special property: "A man hath joy by the answer of his mouth; and a word spoken in good season, how good it is!" The colors of the Bohemian Club are those of the solar spectrum and the flowers those of that beautiful and useful plant, the Solanaceae Nicotianum Tabacum.

The University Normal School

The University Normal School is one of the departments of the University in which those who expect to make teaching their profession receive their professional and cultural training. Though not generally known, the normal department dates back to the very beginning of the University, for the first catalogue ever issued bore these words on its cover, "The Arkansas Industrial Institute and Normal School." In later years, the industrial and normal features were neglected for the more popular academic courses. However, of late years these departments have taken on new life and are now receiving due consideration, and are being liberally patronized.

The normal course covers four years; but the first two may be done in the preparatory school or in the various accredited high schools over the State. Hence, one who enters the Freshman class may complete the course for the normal diploma in two years. The amount of work required is the equivalent of the completion of the Sophomore year in the A. B. course. All the work done in this department is also credited on the A. B. course, so that one may after completing the normal course, receive the A. B. degree in two years of further study. With the elective system prevailing, many students in the regular A. B. course now elect their major in the department of Philosophy and Pedagogy and thus receive the Normal Diploma at the same time they receive the A. B. diploma.

Three years ago, Dr. Johnson succeeded in getting the bill making the normal diploma a Life License, passed by the Legislature, which has greatly assisted in attracting students to the University. When he came to the University six years ago, there were only six students in the Normal and now there are over two hundred. The number graduating from this department has gradually increased during this period from six to thirty, the number applying for graduation this year. The present Junior normal class numbers sixty-five. If all this number return next year there will be something doing.

The Normal offers two courses of study: The Latin Course and the Science Course. The same amount of professional work is required in each of these courses; the difference being that in the first, Latin and Mathematics is emphasized, and in the second, the Natural Sciences. All the theoretical professional work is given by Dr. Johnson and the practice-teaching is done in the "model school" under the direction of his assistant Miss Bland. For this professional work during the two years, the students receive ten hours credit. The other twenty hours is devoted to cultural studies and the work is given by the various University professors.

We are proud that Arkansas has at last waked up to the importance of training her teachers and that we are to have a State Normal, but this does not mean that less emphasis will be laid on the normal training here at the University, for there is a great demand for professionally trained teachers, and both schools will not be able to supply the increased demand for teachers from year to year.

A College Dictionary

Wisdom: Something that will die with the Sophomore—The End—according to the Senior's point of view.

Vacuum: Nothing shut up in a box.

Athlete: A dignified bunch of muscles, unable to split or saw wood.

Freshman (derivation unknown): Usually a fresh boy.

Sophomore (n): A Freshman with advanced standing.

Junior (n): The model student, but opposed to work.

Senior (n): Not only opposed to work, but distinctly in favor of rest.

It is natural that a man who gives himself away should feel cheap.

She—Oh, dear me! Mr. Grubbs, you speak with so much wisdom!

Mr. Grubbs—I am glad that you have discovered that my head is a store house for thought, and not a loafing place for hair.

Professor in Latin—Cæsar se dicat an de cur, egisse lectiem.

Student's translation—Cæsar sicked the cat on the cur; I guess he licked him.

A Freshman's reason for studying on Sunday: If a man is justified in helping the Ass out of the pit on the Sabbath day, how much more justifiable would the Ass be in helping himself out.

A soft answer turneth away no book agent.

Blessed are the innocent, for they have much to learn.

It is not necessary to say excuse me, if you flunk in class; the professor will do all the necessary talking.

Of all the sad words of tongue or pen,

The saddest are these: I've Flunked again.

Dr. Brough—Young gentlemen, I believe that very soon the Federal government will regulate the divorce laws.

Mr. Arnold—Doctor, what clause of the Constitution permits the government to encroach upon the State divorce laws?

Dr. Brough—The commerce clause.

Professor Reynolds—Who was it that ran whom how many times around the wall of what?

Mr. Bunn—Well, Professor, that was when the Queen of France kissed LaFayette.

The Inevitable Remedy

A smashed up youth
To Hill Hall came,
He walked on crutches
For he was lame.

He went to the office
Of the Matron there—
He was the picture
Of woe and care.

His cheeks were pale,
His eyes were red,
A bandage wide
Encircled his head.

"That means," she said,
In motherly tones,
"That you have broken
Some of your bones.

"A panacea
I manufacture
Will tone your blood
And knit the fracture.

"This treatment has
More advantages
Than surgeons' splints
Or bandages."

His hair dishevelled,
His face awry,
A deathly pallor
Was in his eye.

He said he was
All down and out
And felt as though
He had the gout.

To Ma he talked
Most pitiably,
He said he wanted
Some remedy.

She promptly gave
As her diagnosis
That he was suffering
From gilligososis.

At this the youth
Seemed pleased at first
For he was growing
From bad to worse.

But when she mixed it
Before him there
He moaned and screamed
In utter despair.

He said he'd die
If he took that stuff
To kill a horse
It was enough.

But then he reckoned
Without his host,
And a moment later
With salts was dosed.

Never do tonight what you can copy tomorrow.

Mr. Woods called on his best friend, and as he hung up his overcoat he said: "Hang there you twenty-five dollar coat." He laid his hat on the floor and said: "Lay there you five dollar hat."

She (politely)—"Have a seat, you ten cent dude."

Professor—Leister, old boy, there is not but one thing that keeps you from being a poet.

Leister (brightening up)—And that is?

Professor—Your poetry.

When I am not using my hatchet I enjoy passing away my time reading a pure book like the Cardinal.—Carrie.

Any lady, who is gifted in housekeeping and sentimentally inclined, desiring a husband of respectable standing, address the Bachelor Club.

There is no harder work in the world than to knock.

"To see her is to love her,
And love but her forever;
For nature made her what she is,
And never made another."

—Winfrey.

Love keeps out cold better than a cloak,
It serves for food and raiment.

—Hopson.

A Prep.—Are you a teacher up here at this school?
 Professor Droke—Yes, sir.
 Prep.—What do you teach?
 Professor Droke—Mathematics.
 Prep.—I wish I had that instead of my A Algebra.

Corporal George (addressing his squad)—Right dress, front! Now men, we will go down to the infirmary and get guns.

Starkey—I was sent in care of the Y. W. C. A. and it would not pay the express charges.

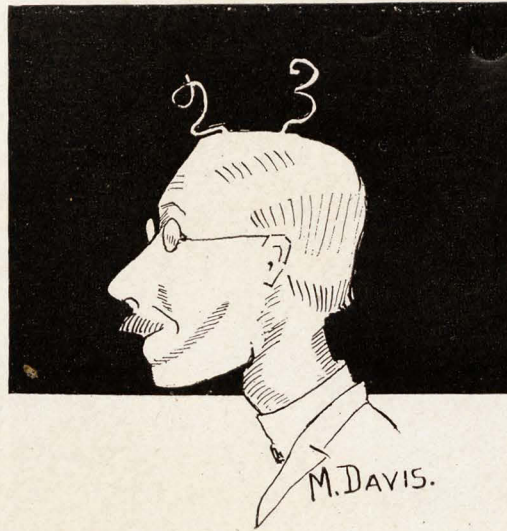

“When sorrows come, they come not in spies, but in battalions.”

Never wedding, ever wooing,
 Still a lovelorn heart pursuing,
 Read you not the harm you are doing,
 In my cheek's pale hue?
 All my life with sorrow strewing
 Wed, or cease to woo.

—Bachelors' Club.

All “gall” is divided into three parts—equally among Sam Wilderson, “Oscar” Starkey and R. Dallas Smith.

A SKETCH FROM LIFE

Prof. Schapper (calling the roll)—Mr. Leister (absent). Well, I guess he is out riding on a poem.

Extracts from Johnson's and Jones' campaign speeches:

Fellow citizens, no longer shall the iron-clad steed of graft corrupt your legislative halls; no longer shall you be deceived by political tricks if you will elect tried and true representatives. My qualifiactions are unlimited, my legislative ability has for its beginning the rising sun and the end the judgment day. I am in favor of patent churns, against whisky, for the latest fashions. I favor an appropriation to put the Ladies' Home Journal in every home. I am in favor of Woman Suffrage. Some favor one bill and some favor another, but as for me, give me the office, or give me death, and then the star-spangled banner shall wave over the home of the free and the land of the brave.

Mr. Allen—A man of your refined culture, your noble character, and with a desire to help your fellow man should be a missionary; but I would advise you to take a Nun to assist you in your missionary work.

Question in History II.—Who, what and when are the following: Chil-lons?

Student's answer—He lived probably about 1200 but did not amount to anything in History.

Dr. Brough—Mr. Smith, I suppose you recall the panic of 1837, do you not?

H. R. Smith—Well, not very much—that was before I was interested in public affairs.

A dude is a fellow with tan slippers, speckled socks, a big cigar in his mouth, his hair parted in the middle, and he goes down the street with his head in the air and air in his head.

Farewell

There's a sad word that I say,
When I reach the parting way—
"Farewell."

Now the book and the task is done,
The labor is spent and the victory won,
Though I hear many voices rising—
Students praising and criticizing—
"Farewell."

I look through my list of friends,
And to their home a Cardinal send;
May its shining rays of gold
Remind them of the days of old.
"Farewell."

Good friends, if the heart can bear
An eternity in it, beyond this world of care,
On and on through endless time—
If so, you shall remain, eternally, in mine.
"Farewell."

Dr. Price's Wheat Flake Celery Food

Nature's food for man—cleanly, as not a human hand touches it from the scouring of the grain of wheat until served upon the table. Baked twice by a high temperature so as to destroy the indigestible properties of the starch and render it easy of digestion to the most delicate stomach. Used daily, it will regulate the bowels. One pound contains more strengthening properties than two pounds of beef. Worth its weight in gold for growing children. Beneficial to every person the whole year round.

Palatable, Nutritious, Easy of Digestion, and Ready to Eat

Have You a Standing ? In the Community

There is nothing under the sun that will establish you on a basis of credit so quickly as a bank account. A bank account will not of itself make you rich, famous or virtuous, but it will help in the good work if you handle it right. Besides a bank account is very convenient, and will be your best friend in time of need.

DESIGNER AND MAKER OF THE PURDUE RING

11 John Street

NEW YORK

Makes Irksome
Correspondence
An Easy Task.

WATERMAN'S IDEAL
alters the entire experience of a writing man or woman. It turns the drudgery of writing into a delight; it means working with a perfect equipment which makes every writing minute capable of more work in better style and with an ease which is in itself a pleasure. In all, it is the perfectly made pen, which, with the patented SPCON FEED—regulating perfectly the flow of ink to the point of the pen, and the clever CLIP-CAP insuring against loss, have made it the world's recognized standard writing instrument. Ask your dealer.
